

ABSTRACT OF THE INVENTION

A method and apparatus for controlling positioning of a user and the user's privacy related information on the mobile Internet includes a location privacy proxy which upon receipt of a request to position a user determines whether a location based service is allowed to position the user. The user retains the right to manually override the rejection of a location based service requesting to position the user.